

STATE LOST THE ECONOMY CO. SUIT

STATE SUPREME COURT HOLDS POWER COMPANY'S TITLE IS GOOD.

SAYS RIVER IS NOT NAVIGABLE

Power Company Wholly Within Its Rights—State Loses Every Point.

A brief dispatch was given to the Telegraph last evening stating that the State of Illinois lost its case against the Economy Light and Power company, but further details of this important case will be of interest to our readers. The state loses on every point made by it in the opinion of the supreme court handed down Tuesday. The opinion is very voluminous, consisting of over 20,000 words. It was written by Judge Vickers. Justice Carter voted against the majority, and may file a dissenting opinion. The main points made by the state were as follows:

1. That the state of Illinois owns the bed of the Desplaines river at the point where the dam of the Economy Light and Power company is located.

2. That the river is a navigable stream and that the proposed dam would constitute an obstruction to navigation.

3. That certain contracts executed by the Illinois and Michigan canal commissioners under which the Economy company claims certain rights are void and offer no justification for the constructing of the dam across the river.

On the first point the court holds that the title which the state originally owned in the bed of the river passed out of the state by a conveyance made by the Illinois and Michigan canal commissioners in 1859 in pursuance of a law passed by the legislature in 1843 which authorized the commissioners to convey any and all lands which the state then owned for the purpose of creating a fund with which to complete the canal.

On the second point the court holds that the question of navigability in the law is navigability in fact and that the evidence introduced by the state in support of the claim that the river is navigable does not show that it has ever been used as a highway for commerce and that owing to its crookedness and the great fall between Lockport and the place where it empties into the Illinois river it presents natural obstructions such as have never so far been overcome.

On the third point the court holds that all the contracts are valid and that the rights claimed by the Economy Light and Power company under them can be exercised for the full period of 20 years.

ARRIVAL OF JAMES J. JEFFRIES FROM EUROPE—EX-CHAMPION AND SAM BERGER ON SHIP.

No pugilist ever received a heartier welcome than was extended to James J. Jeffries, the ex-champion heavyweight, when he arrived in New York from his trip to Europe, where he went for preliminary training for his fight with Jack Johnson. A large delegation of sporting men and reporters, headed by Sam Berger, Jeffries' manager, went down the bay to meet the big fellow, and all hands were pleased at the apparent improvement wrought in his condition by his sojourn abroad. Jeffries said he never felt better in his life, and his appearance seemed to bear out the statement to the entire satisfaction of the experts. He said he was ready to sign articles to meet Johnson, that he weighed about 230 pounds and that if Johnson would sign up the fight would take place early next spring. In the accompanying picture the man on the left is Berger and the other is Jeffries.

STRUCTURE GREATLY IMPROVED

Galena Avenue Crossing of Rock River Was Given Two Coats of Paint.

The painting of the Galena avenue bridge was completed this forenoon by the A. F. Riley company of Milwaukee. ## CHRYSANTHEMUM SEASON NOW AT ITS HEIGHT

LOCAL FLORISTS HAVE HANDSOME DISPLAY OF FALL BLOSSOMS.

The chrysanthemum season is now at full height and the local florists have many flowers on exhibition. O. L. Baird announces that the present season promises to be one of the most successful chrysanthemum seasons in history. The prices are higher than usual and he has at his flower houses north of this city one of the finest exhibitions of growing plants he has had since he started growing flowers.

The October Frosts are through blooming and he is picking White Robinsons. The Halfday yellows are in bloom. He has shipped 100 flowers to Chicago and 75 to St. Louis, to be used at a golden wedding this week. One of the largest of the growing flowers is the Timothy Eaton. The White Robinson is also in full bloom. The yellow Bonifant will be ready to pick in about ten days. The Nago, of the yellow variety, will be the last to bloom.

In the pink the William Duckman is in full bloom and the Maude Dean will bloom later in the season. Mr. Baird is growing 1700 single stem chrysanthemums. The beds are perfectly clean and present a beautiful appearance. The carnation beds are now blooming and they are picking about 75 flowers per day. He has about eight different varieties. He had seven beds 120 by 5 feet each. There is also a very beautiful collection of the rose, the white, yellow, red and light and deep pinks.

YOUNG LAD IS KICKED IN FACE BY A HORSE

SIX YEAR OLD SON OF FIREMAN THOMAS COFFEY IS INJURED.

Edward, the six year old son of Fireman Thomas Coffey, 419 East Seventh street, was severely injured this noon by the kick of a horse. The horse belongs to Miss Pankhurst, corner of Galena avenue and Seventh street, and is kept in a lot near the sidewalk. It is presumed that the little fellow on his way to school, looked through the fence at the animal, which kicked against the fence, knocking off one of the boards, a piece of which struck the boy on the face, cutting a gash an inch and a half long in the cheek. The lad ran home bleeding profusely. The family physician was called and the wound dressed.

GENERAL O. O. HOWARD.

Indian battles, he was probably in more engagements than any other of his kind in the United States army, not excepting even "Fighting Phil Sheridan." General Howard was not only a religious man—he was also a total abstainer.

More than once he was wounded, and he was one of the few generals whose injuries in battles resulted in the loss of a limb. His right arm was lost on June 1, 1862, at the battle of Fair Oaks, and as he was being carried off the battlefield he was met by gallant Phil Kearny, who had lost his left arm at Chapultepec in the Mexican war. "Howard, old fellow," exclaimed Kearny, "you and I will have to buy our gloves in partnership hereafter."

The little town of Leeds, Me., has the honor of being the birthplace of Oliver Otis Howard.

The local camp, No. 127 of Royal Neighbors, will have its hands full Friday of this week, taking care of and entertaining the several hundred delegates of the various camps in nineteen of the districts of the state, who will come here to attend the school of instruction. The school will be held in the Maccabee hall on First street.

The school will be in session all day Friday and Friday evening. The opening session will be public and it is expected that a large number of people will be present. Rev. W. L. Rutherford, pastor of the St. Paul's Lutheran church, will deliver the opening address.

High Officials Coming.

The head officials of the order will be here and have full charge of the school. Among those coming are:

Mrs. Lina M. Collins, St. Paul, Supreme Oracle.

Mrs. Myrtle E. Dade, Rock Island, Supreme Recorder.

Mrs. Cella Jones, secretary of the local camp, hopes that every member will come out and attend the school. To get the school in Dixon is a big feather in the cap of camp No. 127, and now it is up to the members to show their appreciation.

CHICKENS TAKE MESSAGES FROM NEIGHBORS TO OWNERS

NOVEL IDEA FOR HAVING POULTRY CONFINED FROM GARDENS.

A first ward man has hit upon a novel scheme for having his neighbors keep their chickens shut in. He ties kernels of corn to shipping tags on which he has written "Keep your chickens at home." It is said that the chickens swallow the corn and carry the tags to their owners, delivering the message as surely as a postman could. This scheme is said to work well in other cities over the northern part of the state, where it has been tried.

SHALL SCHOOLM'AM BUILD HER FIRES?

THIS QUESTION IS UP TO COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE.

BOTHERING HARVEY SINDLINGER

Assistant Superintendent Is Studying School Law in Effort to Settle Point.

Assistant County Superintendent Sindlinger was wrestling this morning with the question, "Shall a country school teacher build her own fires?"

In one of the school districts in the southern part of the county a pretty school marm has raised this question with the board of directors. She maintains that where this matter has been left out of the contract to teach the school, the board should make the fires, or hire some one to build them. The board has taken exception and has appealed to the county superintendent for information on the point.

County Superintendent Edwards is out in the county visiting schools, and the assistant, in order to make a ten stroke, has taken it upon himself to search through the school law and see what he can find on this particular point.

If he finds the school marm is correct in her version of the matter, he will be strong with her, and on the other hand, if he finds the law favorable to the directors, he may make an impression with them, thus winning out on either side.

But up to the present time the young school man has been unable to find anything on either side.

Until the question is decided the pretty school teacher is building her own fires, and the school moves on in good shape.

All Teachers Interested.

A settlement on either side will interest every country teacher in the county. In the early days when reporters taught school in order to get a start in the world, they hired one of the good, husky boys in the school to build the fires, paying $1 to $1.50 per month for the work. The plan worked fine. Usually the largest boy was employed. That made him the teacher's friend, and if anything out of the ordinary occurred the teacher could depend upon the builder of fires to come to the rescue and the teacher winning her point.

The builder of fires felt that he was a part of the school management and by keeping the idea constantly before him, it always seemed to work like a charm.

A decision on the important question will be handed down within a few days.

FARMERS ARE BRINGING NEW CORN TO THE MARKET

GOOD PRICE IS BEING PAID FOR EARLY DELIVERIES.

New corn is on the market now and several farmers have hauled ear corn to Dixon. New corn is bringing 50 cents a bushel but it is expected that when they begin to shell the grain dealers will have to ship and the market will drop off a few cents. The corn though not as well filled out as in former years is well seasoned and farmers who are picking report that they find but little soft corn.

S.S.S. MAKES A LASTING CURE

Not only its proven ability to cure, but its absolute safety as a remedy, has made S.S.S. the most extensively used of all medicines in the treatment of Contagious Blood Poison. Unlike the strong mineral mixtures, which temporarily remove the outward symptoms and shut the disease up in the system, there to carry on its destructive work on the delicate and vital organs, S.S.S. strikes directly at the root, and by purifying the blood of every trace of the virus, completely and permanently cures the trouble. S.S.S. is Nature's blood purifier, harmless in its action and certain in its good results. It is made from a combination of roots and herbs, each of which has a definite and specific action in purifying the blood. Years were spent in selecting and proportioning the different ingredients, but when S.S.S. was perfected it soon demonstrated its superiority over all other blood medicines, and now, after 40 years, it is still the one and only certain cure for Contagious Blood Poison. While driving out the poison from the circulation S.S.S. builds up and strengthens the system by its fine vegetable tonic effects. If you are suffering with Contagious Blood Poison S.S.S. is your most certain reliance, and because of its freedom from mercury, potash or any other mineral, it is absolutely safe for every one. ## BE HEALTHY! DRINK AT MEALS

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS SCIENTISTS SAY IT'S GOOD FOR YOU.

KNOCKS OLD AXIOM IN HEAD

Subject of Tests Quaffs Water While He Eats and Gains Weight.

At least a quart of water to the amount customarily taken at each meal if you wish to derive the maximum of efficiency from your food.

The water drinking edict has gone forth as the results of tests recently conducted by C. C. Fowler and P. B. Hawk, professors of physiological chemistry at the University of Illinois.

The unanimous opinion of the medical profession has been strongly antagonistic to the taking of water at meal time. The argument of the physicians is that water taken in this way dilutes the digestive juices and therefore lowers the efficiency of those fluids. The University of Illinois experiments, however, apparently overturn the deep-rooted ideas of many doctors.

Young Man the Subject.
In a detailed statement given out by the university authorities yesterday, it was pointed out that the subject of the experiment was a young man 22 years of age, who was normal in all respects, and who weighed 157 pounds when the investigation was inaugurated. The statement continues:

"In experiments of this sort it is customary to use a simple diet in order that the chemical analysis of the food may not entail any undue labor. In this instance the daily diet consisted of three quarters of a pound of crackers, three ounces of corn flakes, two ounces of peanut butter, one and one-half ounces of sugar, three ounces of butter, one quart of milk, nine-tenths quart of water, and in addition during the water period, three quarts addition of water was added to the daily menu. Of the nine-tenths quart of water taken daily during the preliminary and final periods, three-quarters of it was taken between meals."

Results of Water Drinking.
After sifting and boiling down their conclusions and translating them into non-technical language, the investigators believe the influence of copious water drinking with meals to be as follows:

"The water, as it enters the mouth comes first into contact with the saliva, diluting this fluid to a marked degree and causing it to assume greater digestive activity than that possessed by the natural saliva, which is secreted upon food ingested unaccompanied by water.

"Digestion is further accelerated and the products of digestion are more rapidly and completely absorbed through the presence of the large amount of water."

"Finally, as the result of the above factors, the body weight of the water drinker was increased two pounds during the five days of water drinking, a gain which was not subsequently lost.

Dr. Hawk in reporting the results of the investigation was careful to call attention to the fact that the experiments included tests upon but a single subject. He adds:

"However, the experiments up to date indicate that the drinking of large amounts of water with meals is most beneficial from the standpoint of health. Other investigations along similar lines are under way."

The most of my suffering was caused by dull, dragging pains across my kidneys, making stooping or lifting difficult. The kidney secretions also passed irregularly. An advertisement about Doan's Kidney Pills led me to get a box at Leake Bros. Co.'s drug store. This remedy was just the one I needed and one box brought me wonderful benefit. Over 22 years of research along scientific lines places our work entirely in a class by itself, and insures satisfaction regardless of how many have failed.

It has been found that over 80 per cent of all glasses worn are positively injurious to the eye, and are the cause of failing eyesight, cataracts and blindness in thousands of cases; although the wearer may be in total ignorance of the fearful damage being done until it is too late.

That is the reason why 25 states including New York, have recently passed and put into effect stringent laws, placing the sale of glasses under state regulation providing penalties of imprisonment for violation thereof.

"Stone-Res" lenses as prescribed and fitted by us, absolutely conquer headaches and nervousness, restore failing eyesight, make red, weak, watery eyes strong; prevent cataracts and blindness, straighten cross-eyes without the use of knife, and in fact overcome all the dangers of ordinary glasses; making an absolutely safe glass to wear under all circumstances.

THE CAUSE OF COLDS

Good Advice Regarding the Prevention of Coughs and Colds.

If people would only fortify and strengthen the system, the majority of cases of coughs, colds and pneumonia might be avoided. These troubles are frequently due to weakness, which produces a catarrhal condition of the mucous membrane, which is an internal skin of the body. When this skin is weakened it becomes easily infected with germs which cause many of the diseases to which flesh is heir. Healthy mucous membranes are essential safeguards of the body's general health.

An excellent aid in the prevention of coughs, colds, pneumonia, and such like infectious diseases, is a remedy that will prevent or cure catarrh.

We have a remedy which we honestly believe to be unsurpassed in excellence for the prevention of coughs, colds and all catarrhal conditions. It is the prescription of a famous physician, who has an enviable reputation of thirty years of cures gained through the use of this formula. We promise to make no charge for the medicine should it fail to do as we claim. We urge everybody who has need of such a medicine to try Rexall Muc-Tone.

It stands to reason that we could not afford to make such statements and give our own personal guarantee to this remedy if we were not prepared to prove the reasonableness of our claim in every particular; and we see no reason why any one should hesitate to accept our offer and try it. We have two sizes of Rexall Muc-Tone, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Sometimes a 50-cent bottle is sufficient to give marked relief. As a general thing the most chronic case is relieved with an average of three large bottles. You can obtain Rexall Remedies in Dixon only at our store.—The Rexall Store, C. M. Campbell & Son.

SPLITTING NUISANCE.

Hawking and Spitting Is Caused by Catarrh Gerns.

If the local authorities want to stop the disgusting habit of spitting mucous on the sidewalks, they had better instruct the people as to the best method of killing the catarrh germs and curing catarrh.

Offensive breath, frequent sneezing, discharge from the nose, stoppage of the nose, huskiness of the voice, tickling in throat, droppings in throat, a cough, pain in chest, loss of strength, variable appetite, low spirits at times, spasms of coughing, raising of mucus, difficulty in breathing, a loss of vital force.

Rowland Bros. have a sensible remedy (money back if it fails) for catarrh, called Hyomel, which is a vaporized air so antiseptic that when it is breathed over the inflamed and germ-infested membrane, it kills all germ life and cures catarrh.

The price, including hard rubber inhaler, is only $1.00, and money back if it doesn't cure. Extra bottles 50 cents.

"I have tried almost every catarrh cure on the market without benefit. Have been using Hyomel for one week and feel like a new man already."—Wm. V. Goode, Newark, Ohio, June 21, 1909.

Parisian Sage is sold by Rowland Bros. under a positive guarantee to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It gives to women's hair a lustre and radiance that is most fascinating and causes it to grow abundantly.

Parisian Sage is now sold in every first class town in America. A large, generous bottle costs 50 cents and the girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

HONOR PAID BEECHER IS PAID TO M'CARREN

All Creeds and Races Follow Hearse to the Grave.

New York, Oct. 27.—The bell of Brooklyn borough hall tolled for Patrick H. McCarren's funeral as it tolled for Henry Ward Beecher's twenty-two years ago. It was an honor rarely paid. Persons of all races, creeds and shades of political opinion walked in the procession. Some had fought the senator bitterly. Others had been his devoted friends and partisans.

The honorary pallbearers included Mayor McClellan, Comptroller Meiz and President McGowan of the board of aldermen. Mrs. Mary McCarren, the mother, who is eighty-seven years old, remained alone in the room with the dead until a few minutes before the funeral guests were admitted. Monsignor Edward W. McCarty delivered the funeral sermon. He spoke of Senator McCarren's love for his mother and of his public career.

OHIO RIVER FIRST TAFT ANNOUNCES

Cannon Says He Indorses That Speech About Pork Barrel.

PRESIDENT LANDS IN MEMPHIS

Governors Who Are With Nation's Executive on the Trip Down the Mississippi Have Cooked For Him a Possum Which Is Passed Over the Rail of His Boat and Received in the Hands of the Country's First Citizen.

Memphis, Oct. 27.—A southern welcome was given President Taft when his steamboat tied up here. He has received his voice partly and, anyhow, what he lacked in voice he more than made up with smiles.

Coming down the river the president got another possum. It was obtained at Cairo and the governors who are accompanying Taft had it cooked. Then their boat ran alongside the president's and the beast, reposing on a platter and surrounded by rich yellow yams, was passed over into the president's own hands. The twenty-five governors sang, "Oh Dat Possum" and the president bowed his acknowledgments.

The president and Speaker Cannon on the trip down the Mississippi are fighting out the question whether or not bonds should be issued for the improvement of inland waterways. Cannon will be found supporting Taft in the recommendation for bonds, provided the president cannot be kept from such action, but the speaker will do his best to get Taft to change his mind.

Cannon says that of course he indorses Taft's statement against "pork barrel" politics in distributing funds for river and harbor improvements. This indorsement, coming from the man who has held the coyer to the "pork barrel" for a good many years, was received with smiles by the 150 congressmen at the Cairo meeting.

Taft has indicated that the Mississippi can wait until the Ohio improvements are finished. "It seems better," he said, "to push first the completion of the Ohio river improvements as a demonstration of what can be done and then take up the Mississippi. Perhaps that plan won't meet the views of the people in the Mississippi valley and Illinois, but they can congratulate themselves that I haven't the power to decide on the subject."

WITH ESKIMOS

Danish Defender of Dr. Cook Authority on Frozen North.

IS AUTHOR OF A POLAR BOOK.

He Went to Greenland With Danish Expedition in 1902 to Study Racial History of the Greenlanders, Etc.
Returned There in 1906, to Be Gone
Six Years.

Knud Rasmussen, the Danish explorer, now at Julianehaab, Greenland, who defends Dr. Frederick A. Cook's claim as to the discovery of the north pole, was a member of the Danish literary expedition which left Copenhagen early in 1902 and spent two years
among the Eskimos in Greenland.

Rasmussen's assertions of his belief in Cook's story after talks with Eskimo familiar with Cook's exploits have materially strengthened the Brooklyn doctor's position in various circles which have shown an inclination to doubt parts of his narrative.

Rasmussen spent the two years he was in Greenland on the stated occasion in studying the racial history of the Eskimos.

The other principals of the expedition were L. Mylius Erichsen and Count Harald Moltke. Organized originally as a private enterprise, the objects were deemed of such importance from a geographical and ethnological point of view that the total expenses of the expedition were assumed by the Danish kingdom.

Went to Cape York.

The expedition arrived in Greenland in June, 1902. It left Upernavik for Cape York in March, 1903, spending nearly ten months among the polar Eskimos, and left for the south again in June, 1904, breaking its journey by a stop in west Greenland and returning to Copenhagen in September, 1904.

In August, 1906, Rasmussen left Copenhagen for Greenland, intending to be gone six years to complete his researches into the ethnological and social habits of the Eskimos, the tour, as originally planned, to cover the entire north coast of North America as far as Alaska.

For this work Rasmussen is peculiarly fitted, as he is part Eskimo himself.
His mother is a south Greenland Eskimo. His father is Christian Rasmussen, a Danish clergyman, who spent over twenty years as a missionary among the natives of southwest Greenland. At the age of fourteen Knud Rasmussen went to Denmark with his parents and entered the University of Copenhagen, from which he was graduated with honors.

Three Branches of Race.

The results of his early association with his kinsfolk, supplemented by his more mature studies of 1902 and 1903, were published in Danish under the titles of "The New People" and "The Lash of the North Wind." They were translated into English in 1908 and published under the title of "People of the Polar North." The book deals with three distinct Eskimo branches which comprise the population of Greenland —first, the west Greenlanders, being the civilized and Christianized inhabitants of west and southwest Greenland; second, the east Greenlanders, being the former inhabitants of the southeast coast, now practically deserted except in one area on the east coast known as Angmagssalik, and third, the polar Eskimos.

In this record of the lives of the most northerly dwelling people of the world, comprising the nomadic groups between the degrees of 76 and 78 north latitude, are embraced their legends, religious beliefs and fables—everything,
in fact, connected with their folklore and their present views of life. In the preface to his book Rasmussen says:

"When I was a child I used often to hear an old Greenlandic woman tell how, far away north, at the end of the world, there lived a people who dressed in bearskins and ate raw flesh. Their country was always shut in by ice, and the daylight never reached over the tops of their high fields (mountains).
Whoever wished to go there must travel with the south wind, right up to the lord of the wild north gales.
Even before I knew what traveling meant I determined that one day I would go and find these people."

"The Eskimos," he says, "are much like animals. The men love their wives, but when the fancy takes them they maltreat them in a manner that we civilized men would consider brutal. 'But,' say the Eskimos, 'if affection is to be kept alive the women must feel occasionally that the man is strong.'"

Even the presence of a civilized man who had Eskimo blood in his veins aroused the suspicions of the southeast Greenlanders. All sorts of rumors, he says, were circulated about his coming, "chiefly hawked about by old Christian women whose tongues required a little exercise." To win their confidence Rasmussen adopted the policy of asking no questions for a number of days.

"Thus," he says, "I succeeded at length in winning the confidence of the people, and during my life with them they gave me descriptions of the events that had been mainly responsible for their determination to migrate to the west coast and their resultant conversion to Christianity."

Marriage Is Announced.

Sixty relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Nellie M.
Potter, 417 Van Buren avenue, and tendered her daughter, Miss Stella,
a surprise, the event being her birthday anniversary. Most of the friends present were members of the Ladies of the G. A. R. Circle, of which Miss Potter is a member. As was announced some time ago, it was expected that the date of Miss Potter's marriage to Ray Gwinn of Champaign, would be announced. Here was the real surprise of the evening. The hostess reversed the surprise by making known to her guests that she and Ray Gwinn were united in marriage at Monticello, Ill., on Aug. 30.
Rev. Dudley Dowdy of the M. E. church of that city officiating. The marriage was kept secret, only the members of the Potter family knowing of the event, until it was announced by Rev. A. E. Randall in behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Gwinn last evening.

Upon the announcement the guests congratulated Mr. and Mrs. Gwinn.
Mr. and Mrs. Gwinn will reside in Champaign after March 1st. Mrs.
Gwinn will continue to reside in Dixon until that date. The groom is a member of the firm of Gwinn & Son, who built the Dixon high school building, and it was while here that he first met Miss Potter. Mrs. Gwinn was presented with many beautiful presents on last evening, consisting of silverware and linen. The evening was delightfully spent with games and music. Refreshments were served. The guests on departing again extended congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Gwinn.

Ideal Club.

The Ideal club held a profitable meeting at the home of Mrs. W. S.
Filson Tuesday afternoon. Mrs.
Lloyd Lewis gave a reading in a very pleasing manner. Mrs. Carl Sea-berg read a sketch of the life of Men-delsohn, the great composer whose work will always be appreciated by those who are best able to judge of its worth. "The Founders of Lowell" was the title of a paper prepared and read by Mrs. K. J. Reed in which the foundation of the great manufacturing industry in the United States was interestingly described. During the pleasant social hour which followed the program, the hostess served delicious refresh-

Ancient Concrete.

That the Romans were very familiar with concrete and gave consideration to its use examination of the concrete work in the forum clearly shows.
Their concrete contained generally only two kinds of stone, travertine and sciele, in equal parts. Sciele is a hard, closely knit rock, very similar to our bluestone or trap rock in color as well as quality. Travertine is a volcanic rock not so hard as sciele, considerably lighter in color, and was desirable on account of its porosity, which insured a good bond with the cement. In all the Roman work the combination of the travertine and the sciele is clearly distinguishable.—Cement Age.

BRIGGS' CARTOONS STRONG FEATURE IN TRIBUNE

ADMIRERS HASTEN TO DEFEND HIM FROM CRITICISM OF WRITER.

Recently there appeared in the contribution column of the Chicago Tribune a communication criticizing the cartoons of Clair Briggs, a former Dixon boy, whose clever work has made him one of the leading cartoonists of the country and who is filling the place of McCutcheon while the latter is in Africa. In response to this criticism several letters have been written, two of which are as follows:

Coffee and Cartoons.

Chicago, Oct. 21—Editor of the Tribune—Friend Brower, who in this morning's paper condemned the cartoons now running in the Tribune should pause a moment and consider ere he writes. To him these cartoons may seem bad, but were he able to show us where he affords his fellowmen half as much pleasure as these same "footless drawings" we might sit up and take notice. In the meantime let us advise him to have another cup of coffee ere he reads his morning paper. W. H.

Likes the Cartoons.

Chicago, Oct. 21—Editor of the Tribune—Down where I live we enjoy the work of your cartoon "stars" in the absence of the "planet," and, having enjoyed many a laugh with Mr. Briggs on the sporting cartoon, feel keenest pleasure to find his brilliancy so often on the front page, a place he daily demonstrates his fitness to fill.

We think Mr. Briggs' shoulders fit the mantle of succession admirably.

DIXON OPERA HOUSE.

Tonight is the last opportunity to see the Baader-La Vell Trio and their great bicycle act, and "Elone, the Squaw Girl," at the Dixon opera house. Tomorrow there is a change of program complete, when the four Johnson Students, better known as "Club Mandies" in Indian club swinging, and George Smedley, the King of Strings, in a musical act will be here for four days. The pictures will all be new and an even better show than the first three days will be given. The management will cheerfully refund any one's money who says this show is not worth several times the price, which is only 10 cents. Saturday matinee at 2:45 p. m.

Gylleck, the magician, leaves for Chicago to accept a position with the Washburn and Irving Booking company. The company has contracts with a large number of the theatres in the city and Mr. Gylleck expects to remain with the company for the remainder of the season.

JOHN AND VAL HEFT ARE IN SOUTH DAKOTA

DIXON YOUNG MEN ARE KEEPING UP THEIR INTEREST IN MUSIC.

The Platte, S. D., Enterprise contains the following notice of a new orchestra in which Dixon young men are interested:

Platte has a new orchestra, the Heft orchestra. Platte has long been in need of a good orchestra and this one composed of Miss Myrtle Eastman, pianist; Cecil Eahart, clarinetist; Axel Anderson, cornetist, and Val Heft, director and violinist, gives promise of becoming a great success. They have been devoting all of their spare time the past month to practicing.

Val Heft, the director, comes to us from Dixon, Ill., and is indeed a competent director and an excellent violinist as all who have heard him play know. The other members of the orchestra are all residents of Platte and their musical competency is well known.

After this week they are in readiness to fill all engagements, including music for dances, sacred concerts and social entertainments of all kinds.

In sending the above item from the Platte paper Joan Heft says: "We have a quartet here, but not like the old one we had in Dixon."

WOMAN'S COLUMN

WOMEN WHO GIVE MILLIONS.

Although cold figures are clumsy in the matter of heart and charity, a table would show that almost a dozen women, each in her own way, have each given a million dollars or more to the uplift of humanity:

Mrs. Leland Stanford... $33,000,000
Mrs. Russell Sage... 25,000,000
Mrs. Thos. F. Ryan... 5,000,000
Mrs. A. A. Anderson... 1,750,000
Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt... 1,000,000
Mrs. F. C. Penfield... 1,000,000
Miss Helen Gould... 10,000,000
Miss Mary J. Wintrop... 2,000,000
Miss Eliza O. Ropes... 2,000,000
Miss Anna T. James... 1,000,000
Miss Grace H. Dodge... 1,000,000

There is a secret in giving millions: they can be given in such a way that the good behind them is thought of rather than the mere dollars and cents. A woman's heart holds the key. Men send gifts, women bring them. Helen Gould meets at church services with the sailors, or talks to lone watchmen on her railroads; Mrs. Sage asks the workman on the street what his family has to eat; Mrs. Vanderbilt goes among the suffering in the hospital, scattering flowers and cheer; Miss Dodge meets the girl strange to the city at the station and starts her out in safety. The man philanthropist pushes the bundle of letters over to his private secretary.

IS WOMAN A SERVANT?

"In the main, the position of woman is curiously like that of the servant in the house. A servant with good wages and a generous allowance of afternoons and evenings out, a servant carefully nursed when ill, and attended by the master's own physician, a servant who is sure always of generous tips when there is extra work, and of carefully sinecured old age. Like a servant, however, it is to her interest to spy on the master, to discover his weaknesses and to play upon them. In some respects it is a pleasant position, although it is always an uncertain one. For, from her birth to her death, her welfare depends not on herself, but on a man; her father or brother or guardian first, her husband second, her son last. Luck always controls her destiny. Though the wheel of chance may set her in a pleasant place today, there is always the dread on her of a week's notice, the possibility of the crowded vista of the employment agency tomorrow.

"Her duties, ranging over a limited arc, are of human endeavor, made for a cheap versatility rather than as in the case of the men, for the development of special gifts. Her working hours and her wages are arbitrarily fixed by men. Her habits are settled by men. Her intellectual convictions are doled out to her by men. She has never, until this generation, been permitted to cultivate her mind. As her chief control of man is through her senses, she thinks almost entirely with her emotions."

HAS WOMAN A SENSE OF HUMOR?

Not a wife-Eve but plays up from morning to night to Adam's idea of his own importance. She must assume always that he is absolute monarch of all the little domestic kingdom, no matter how firmly entrenched she be as the power behind the throne. She must assume always that he is the hub of his business world, that it would fly to pieces were he to absent himself from it for a week, assume it even though she knows that it is his capable under-clerk who keeps the wheels moving.

And last, "Women have no sense of humor," says—does the man live who has not said it? It is the oldest bromidium extant. Yet man has always before him the irrefutable evidence that, for countless generations woman has lived with him. How could she have survived that ordeal minus the sense of humor?

WHAT ROBBIE WANTED TO KNOW.

He asked so many questions that day that he finally wore out his mother's patience.

"Robert," she cried, "if you ask me another question I shall put you to bed without your supper."

Robert promptly asked another, and was promptly packed off to bed. Later his mother repented. After all, asking questions was the only way he could acquire knowledge; so she tiptoed upstairs, knelt beside Robert's bed, and told him she was sorry.

"Now, dear," she said, "if you want to ask one more question before you go to sleep, ask it now and I will try to answer."

Robert thought for a moment, then said, "Mother, how far can a cat spit?"

THE GENTLEMAN QUESTION.

The truth is, that since gentlemanliness ceased to be a profession, or business, there have been no gentlemen. The word, as now used, is purely negative. It connotes something we wish our neighbor possessed, in dealing with us. It expresses something of which we regret the lack. We doubt its existence, save the portion with which we ourselves were so strangely and fortunately endorsed. Otherwise it is a vague, elusive thing, seldom articulated except as a proclamation by some earnest individual in the last stages of inebriety.

A LITERAL DISTINCTION.

Bishop Potter was known as quite a wit, and often took delight in turning his humor loose on his associates, but here is an instance where the joke, although quite unintentional, was on the bishop. He was to preach at a certain parish in the west in the evening, and the congregation was not a little amused at the somewhat ambiguous announcement of their worthy pastor, who said:

"Remember our special service next Sunday afternoon. The Lord will be with us during the morning services, and Bishop Potter in the evening."

REALISM.

During one of his presidential trips, Mr. Cleveland, accompanied by Secretary Olney, arrived at a town in a heavy storm, and they were driven from the station with hall-stones rattling on the roof of their carriage. A brass band, undismayed by the weather, stuck bravely to its post and played the welcoming airs. "That is the most realistic music I have ever heard," remarked Mr. Cleveland.

"What are they playing?" asked the Secretary of State.

"Hail to the Chief," with real hail."

Mrs. W. J. McAlpine is in Chicago.

Attorney A. C. Warner returned last evening from an extended business trip through the country north of Devil's Lake, N. D.

ITO MARKED FOR DEATH LONG TIME

Korean Killed American Who Was Aid to the Prince.

MISSION TO HARBIN A SECRET

Death of the Statesman Who Was the Father of the New Japan Will Delay Any Action in Manchuria That Was Contemplated by the Mikado—Assassin, After the Deed, Dramatically Flourishes His Revolver and Makes No Attempt to Escape.

Harbin, Oct. 27.—The assassination of Prince Hirobuni Ito, the maker of modern Japan and the foremost statesman of the empire, by a Korean in this city is believed to be the outcome of an organized plot.

Revenge for what he regarded as harsh treatment of his country and family by the prince is the avowed motive of the assassin for his deed. He followed his victim here for the express purpose of killing him.

The Japanese statesman was shot down at the Tsingtao railway station at the moment when he was acknowledging a noisy welcome.

Smiling and bowing, he turned to make his way toward the Russian finance minister, M. Kokovoff, who was awaiting him on the station platform a few paces distant.

Suddenly a half dozen revolver shots fired in quick succession were heard, followed by the cries of those standing near the prince, who had either been wounded or imagined themselves to be.

At the second report Prince Ito staggered and fell fainting. It was subsequently found that he had received three bullets, two of which entered the abdomen.

He Was Sixty-Eight Years Old.

Prince Ito did not recover consciousness, and died twenty minutes later.

When the excitement had somewhat subsided it was found that three other members of the party on the platform had been injured.

Prince Ito's private secretary received a bullet, as did Japanese Consul General Kawaken and General Manager Tanaka of the South Manchurian railway. It is thought that these three are not mortally wounded.

The perpetrator of the outrage was not hard to locate, as he stood defiantly in the crowd, revolver in hand.

Prince Ito was sixty-eight years old. He was the emperor's trusted adviser, and his reputation as a statesman was world-wide. Among the nations he often was referred to as the greatest of Japan's diplomats. He framed the imperial constitution which gave Japan its position among the civilized nations, and this was considered his greatest achievement.

He literally braved death to help Japan. In 1863 he made his pilgrimage to England, though it was against the law of his country to go abroad and the penalty for violation was death. Inspired by patriotism and a desire to learn the secret of occidental supremacy, he undertook the trip which proved so beneficial to his country.

Prince Ito visited the United States in 1879 as a commissioner to investigate the financial and banking systems. On his return to Japan he was appointed vice minister of public works.

In 1880 he negotiated with Li Hung Chang on the Korean question and concluded the treaty which formed the basis of Japan's justification of her war with China in 1894. Later he negotiated a treaty of peace with China and at the close of the war was made a marquis. After the Russo-Japanese war he was resident general of Korea, in which capacity he became the object of Korean hatred.

His Mission a Secret One.

Prince Ito left Tokyo, Oct. 16, for a tour of Manchuria. He was to meet M. Kokovoff, Russian minister of finance. The conference, it was said, was at the behest of Japan, and Russian and other diplomats had attached great importance to it, although the motives impelling Japan to propose it were not known. The subjects to be discussed were not suggested in the Japanese overtures, and M. Kokovoff, it was said, had barred political questions. He said that he was competent to discuss only financial and technical subjects, these covering the status of the Manchurian railroads.

Officials were quick to draw a parallel between the killing of Prince Ito and the assassination in San Francisco about a year and a half ago of Durham Stevens, who had been Prince Ito's right-hand man in the reorganization of the Korean government following the Russo-Japanese war.

It was known that the lives of both Prince Ito and Stevens were in constant jeopardy and every precaution was taken by the Japanese officers to protect them.

Stevens had been granted a liberal pension by the Japanese government and had returned to America to rejoin his family, only to fall before the bullet of a vengeful Korean just as he crossed the portals of his own land.

A probable result of this last assassination will be an indefinite postponement of the negotiations regarding the railroad conditions in Manchuria, which have so actively engaged the foreign offices of the great powers for the last two months, or rather, to be exact, since Aug. 31, the date of the signature of the treaty between China and Japan.

HOW ROOSEVELT KILLED A LION.

Ex-President Describes Exploit In Detail.

HE BROKE THE BEAST'S BACK

Three Well Directed Shots Required to Dispose of the Animal, Which Was on Point of Charging the Hunter—Lady Pease an Interested Spectator of Encounter.

How Colonel Roosevelt killed one of his first lions is told by the former president himself in an article entitled "African Game Trails" written for the November Scribner's. Here is the experience of the distinguished sportsman from his own pen:

"At this moment my black sails, Simba, came running up to me and took hold of the bridle. He had seen the chase from the line of march and had cut across to join me. There was no other sail, or gun bearer, anywhere near, and his action was plucky, for he was the only man afoot, with the lion at bay. Lady Pease had also ridden up and was an interested spectator only some fifty yards behind me.

How Roosevelt Planned.

"Now, an elderly man with a varied past, which includes rheumatism, does not vault lightly into the saddle, as his sons, for instance, can, and I had already made up my mind that in the event of the lion's charging it would be wise for me to trust to straight powder rather than to try to scramble into the saddle and get under way in time.

The arrival of my two companions settled matters. I was not sure of the speed of Lady Pease's horse, and Simba was on foot, and it was of course out of the question for me to leave him. So I said, 'Good, Simba; now we'll see this thing through,' and gentle mannered Simba smiled a shy appreciation of my tone, though he could not understand the words.

"The Lion Turned Toward Us."

"I still could not see the lion when I knelt, but he was now standing up, looking first at one group of horses and then at the other, his tail lashing to and fro, his head held low and his lips dropped over his mouth in peculiar fashion, while his harsh and savage growling rolled thunderously over the plain. Seeing Simba and me on foot, he turned toward us, his tail lashing quicker and quicker.

"Resting my elbow on Simba's bent shoulder, I took steady aim and pressed the trigger. The bullet went in between the neck and shoulder, and the lion fell over on his side, one fore leg in the air. He recovered in a moment and stood up, evidently very sick, and once more faced me, growling hoarsely. I think he was the eve of charging. I fired again at once, and this bullet broke his back just behind the shoulders, and with the next I killed him outright after we had gathered round him."

Kills Leopard Barehanded.

"My friend Carl Akely of Chicago actually killed barehanded a leopard which sprang on him. He had already wounded the beast twice, crippling it in one front and one hind paw, whereupon it charged, followed him as he tried to dodge the charge and struck him full just as he turned. It bit him in one arm, biting again and again as it worked up the arm from the wrist to the elbow, but Akely threw it, holding its throat with the other hand and flipping its body to one side.

"It luckily fell on its side with its two wounded legs upmost, so that it would not tear him. He fell forward with it and crushed in its chest with his knees until he distinctly felt one of its ribs crack. This, said Akely, was the first moment when he felt he might conquer. Redoubling his efforts, with knees and hand he actually choked and crushed the life out of it, although his arm was badly bitten."

THE LATEST FROM PARIS.

Mme. Noria's New Gown Bags at the Knees, but Not at the Ankles.

Arriving in New York from Paris, Mme. Noria, a singer, wore the most extraordinary suit which has yet been brought over this year and shows which way the Parisian fashions are blowing. It is a very tight fitting chiffon velvet which hugs at the knees and is very tight around the ankles. In fact, it is impossible for Mme. Noria to take very long steps while she wears this gown. It is trimmed only with round Spanish buttons, also of black. To top it off she wore a smart turban of white fox and carried a white fox muff and stole. Mme. Noria's appearance on the deck was almost a sensation.

New Idea in Weddings.

News comes from Vienna of a new idea at weddings—the wearing of a wreath of roses by the mother of the bride. Upon arriving home after the ceremony the bride's mother removes her hat and puts on a half circle of roses, composed of buds with silver petals and foliage.

SHERIFF FINED $500 BY COURT

Cook County, Illinois, Official Must Also Pay Costs.

HELD IN CONTEMPT OF COURT

Decision Is the Sequel to the Case of Abner Smith, Convicted of Bank Wrecking in Chicago—Sheriff Stated He Was Keeping Prisoner Out of Penitentiary Under Instructions from Governor Deneen and a Member of the Board of Pardons.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 27.—Sheriff Christopher Strassheim of Cook county was fined $500 and costs by the Illinois supreme court, which held him in contempt for failing to obey promptly the mandate of the court that Abner Smith, convicted of wrecking the Bank of America, of Chicago, be sent to the penitentiary at Joliet.

The delay of the sheriff in carrying out the mandate was commented on at the time and was generally ascribed to friendship, political and personal, for the convicted banker and former judge.

Strassheim, however, denied this, and said he was holding back under instructions from Governor Deneen and E. A. Snively of the pardon board.

The attitude of these officials, according to Strassheim, was due to promises by Smith that he would show what had become of some of the money concerned in the case.

CHICAGO HIT BY DECISIONS

Questions Affecting Its Future Decided Against City by Court.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 27.—Three great questions vitally affecting the future of Chicago were decided against the city among the decisions handed down at Springfield by the Illinois supreme court. Montgomery Ward wing his suit to prevent the erection of the Field museum on the lake front.

The state loses on every point in its effort to remove the dam built by the Economy Light and Power company across the Des Plaines river near Dresden Heights. The court holds that the title to the river bed passed from the state by sale in 1859; that the river is not navigable between Lockport and the mouth of the Illinois, and that the valuable rights given the company by the Illinois and Michigan canal commissioners are valid for twenty years.

The city of Chicago must pay to the railroads the $700,000 bill of damages arising from the destruction of rolling stock in the American Railway Union strike led by Eugene V. Debs in 1894. There is hope for the city, however, in the fact that the United States supreme court, in a suit now before it, may declare void the Illinois law under which this award is made.

SAYS WIFE EATS TOO MUCH

Chicago Man Locks Pantry Before Going to Work.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—When August Hermes was asked in police court why he locked the pantry door at his house, 624 Oakdale avenue, when he went to work, he replied:

"My wife eats too much; she eats all day."

Mrs. Hermes, who weighs 100 pounds, while her husband is twice as heavy, said she was unable to get anything to eat until he returned at night. Hermes, who was accused of cruelty, was discharged after being told to leave the pantry key behind him.

CHICAGO'S CASH IS MISSING

Comptroller's Vault Entered and Box Containing $450 Removed.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—Theft of a money box containing $450 from a vault in the office of the city comptroller was discovered by F. A. Aaskad, assistant paymaster.

Some person who had obtained keys to the locker in which the money box had been placed entered the vault and took the box.

Detectives are examining all employees who had keys.

Federal Attorney Seeks to Fear Convicted Banker Will Leave Country.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—The government has asked the federal court of appeals to order John R. Walsh's imprisonment.

Federal Attorney Sims cites the cases of several wealthy men who have fled the country after conviction for misapplication of funds placed under their control.

DES PLAINES NOT NAVIGABLE

Illinois Supreme Court Renders Decision Against the State.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 27.—The supreme court decided the case of the Economy Light and Power company against the state of Illinois.

The decision holds that the Des Plaines river is not navigable.

Keeps the Warner Lands Intact.

Clinton, Ill., Oct. 27.—A supreme court decision in the case of Minnie Warner Mettler, against Vespasian Warner is that the lands of the estate of John Warner cannot be divided until the expiration of fifteen years.

AGONY OF ECZEMA BEYOND WORDS

Whole Body a Mass of Raw, Torturing Humor—Hair All Fell Out and Ears Seemed Ready to Drop Off—Clothing Would Stick to Bleeding Flesh—Hoped Death Would End Fearful Suffering.

CASE SEEMED HOPELESS BUT CUTICURA CURED HER

"Words cannot describe the terrible eczema I suffered with. It broke out on my head and kept spreading until it covered my whole body. I was almost a solid mass of sores from head to foot. I looked more like a piece of raw beef than a human being. The pain and agony I endured seemed more than I could bear. Blood and pus oozed from the great sores on my scalp, from under my finger nails, and nearly all over my body. My ears were so crusted and swollen I was afraid they would break off. Every hair in my head fell out. I could not sit down, for my clothes would stick to the raw and bleeding flesh, making me cry out from the pain. My family doctor did all he could, but I got worse and worse. My condition was awful. I did not think I could live, and wanted death to come and end my frightful sufferings.

"In this condition my mother-in-law begged me to try the Cuticura Remedies. I said I would, but had no hope of recovery. But oh, what blessed relief I experienced after applying Cuticura Ointment. It cooled the bleeding and itching flesh and brought me the first real sleep I had had in weeks. It was as grateful as ice to a burning tongue. I would bathe with warm water and Cuticura Soap, then apply the Ointment freely. I also took Cuticura Resolvent for the blood. In a short time the sores stopped running, the flesh began to heal, and I knew I was to get well again. Then the hair on my head began to grow, and in a short time I was completely cured. I cannot praise Cuticura enough. I wish I could tell everybody who has eczema to use Cuticura. My condition was so terrible that what cured me cannot fail to cure anybody of this awful disease. If any one doubts the truth of this letter, tell them to write to me. Mrs. Wm. Hunt, 135 Thomas St., Newark, N. J., Sept. 28, 1908."

Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent (liquid or pills) are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug and Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, Mass. Write for Mailed Free, Latest Cuticura Skin Book.

PRISON TERM FOR HEINZE

New York, Oct. 27.—Arthur P. Heinze, brother of F. Augustus Heinze, has been sentenced by Judge Ray in the United States circuit court to pay a fine of $250 and to serve ten days in prison.

Heinze was convicted on the charge of obstructing the administration of justice by aiding the shipment to Canada of books of the United Copper company.

Pending an appeal Heinze is at liberty on $2,500 bail.

SUGAR TRUST MEN ESCAPE

Government Too Slow In Prosecuting Alleged Violators of Sherman Law.

New York, Oct. 27.—Circuit Judge Holt has decided that the government had been too slow in getting after at least two of the individuals indicted with the American Sugar Refining company for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Gustav E. Kissel and Thomas B. Harned will escape trial through the operation of the statute of limitations.

It was charged that Kissel and Harned, with others, were in a conspiracy to prevent the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company from doing business.

STUDENTS ON SULPHUR DIET

Dried Fruit Is Being Tested by Commissioners Named by Roosevelt.

Berkeley, Cal., Oct. 27.—The commission named by President Roosevelt to investigate the claim by California growers that the sulphuring of dried fruit is not harmful is conducting tests.

Seven University of California students have been living on sunned peaches and cots for several weeks and their diet is to remain the same for two months.

So far the seven have thrived well and they believe that instead of injuring them the sulphur will do them good.

Kate's Financiering.

In these days of commercialism they tell us there is no romance, the one excludes the other—commercialism, no romance; romance, no commercialism. Perhaps this is so, yet there must be a few exceptions. I know of one, I, a real estate agent, discovered within a cold, prosaic real estate transfer the threads of a most harrowing case of duplicity, craftiness and romance. Tying these threads together and showing them to the guilty person—my cousin—I obtained full confession after promising never to tell. The best of it is that the other interested person does not suspect the romance in which he figured.

About a year before these events, my cousin Kate had, to prove her independence, obtained a position as stenographer for an architectural firm in town. Here were employed several young draughtsmen, who promptly became interested in Kate, but she treated them all impersonally, except one. In this matter, among many others, Kate showed her queerness of taste, for Kate the fly-away, Kate the flirt, Kate the conqueror, chose to "adopt" Billy Thorne.

Billy Thorne was a quiet, hard-working fellow, generally considered rather prosaic. He got a fair salary and saved most of it, never went anywhere and was never known to talk to a girl. Hence, there was great wonderment in the office when one morning in walked Billy Thorne with the stenographer. He repeated this performance several times in the next few weeks, and even went out to lunch with her. He carried on in this way until he became a regular caller on Wednesdays and Sundays. Then Billy began to think. Billy had ideas on certain matters. He thought that a man ought not to propose to a girl till he owned a house; that a man should never get in debt was another axiom.

Inasmuch as his bank account grew slowly he could see no possibility of further progress in his love affair, and he knew that he must go either backward or forward. Hence, he was not at all smiling when he rang the bell at Kate's home on one balmy Sunday afternoon, nor did Kate's proposition to take a walk cheer him greatly. They had taken walks before and Billy had found that contemplation of admirable building sites one could not buy was depressing.

Although Billy had never spoken of building sites in a personal way, nor expounded his ideas on debt and marriage to Kate, she, being observant, had put this and that together and got a fairly good idea of the state of affairs. Hence she understood Billy's glumness and let him walk along at her side, scowling and silent.

As they had done before, they stopped and read a certain sign on a certain lot. Billy laughed—a little bitterly—and said: "If we could only have an earthquake I'd be happy."

Kate looked puzzled and he explained: "An uncle of mine left me 200 acres of rocks on the Maine coast, and a nice, accommodating earthquake might, in the general mixup, set a few acres down here, where I could use them."

"What part of Maine are they in?" asked Kate.

"Other side of Calais. I've been trying to sell that land for several years, but nobody wants it."

"Did you ever advertise?" "Yes," answered Billy moodily. "Nothing doing."

Then they walked on. Here's where I come into the story. Just because I had proposed fear or five times to her—and been rejected each time—Kate used me for all sorts of errands, so I was not a bit surprised when Kate came into the office and sat down.

"Well," I asked, "what is it now? Want me to circulate a petition for a municipal theater or restore a lost dog?"

"No, John; have you met Mr. Thorne?" She even blushed.

"No, but I'd like to—on a dark night," I answered, looking as fierce as I could.

"Don't be silly, John; I want you to go to Mr. Thorne and buy some land he has for sale. It's near Calais. Me. I'll buy it from you—you know Aunt Emmy left me some money—so you won't lose."

"What in the world," I shrieked, "are you going to do with land up in that place; start a fresh air hospital or a summer hotel?"

"John," she answered severely, "you were always too inquisitive. Now do as you're told. And John, don't mention me at all. Pay him a good price. I must go now. Good-by."

As usual I did as I was told. It was throwing money away, but it was Kate's money.

And now I go out of the story, for the next day—Sunday—after I bought the gold brick, Billy Thorne ran up the steps to Kate's house and hardly got inside before he announced joyfully: "Sold the rocks in Maine to some fellow—names Marlow—millionaire, I guess, for he paid me a big price. And now I've got something else to say." The rest, Kate says, was "personal."

Some time later Kate—I can imagine her look of innocence at the time—asked Billy: "Did you sell the land through an agent?" Billy answered: "No, all by myself."

I could tell her a few things, but Kate won't let me—Boston Post.

Sally's Birthday Gift.

By Abbie Tibbetts.

"You have never given me a nice birthday present yet, grandma," declared Sally fractiously. "You've always given me boxes of thread or packages of needles or something of that kind. But you always give Lucy a nice present."

"My money is my own," returned Grandma Brooks, rebukingly. "And my dear granddaughter Lucy is always respectful toward me."

"I think I'm the one who takes care of you, grandma—I take care of your house, anyhow. I should think you might give me a set of furs, or something," she added disconsolately.

"I'm afraid, Sally, you have inherited all the imperfections of your mother. She was an unsending trial to me from the day she was born till she ran away to be married."

"I don't wonder my mother ran away from you," flashed Sally. "I should run away myself only—only—"

"And then further speech was checked by a sob.

"Only Wesley Burbank is a very prudent young man," Grandma commented with a chuckle. "He prefers to wait; he thinks I'll probably leave you a lot of money some time. But if I should you would spend it on furs and things, or lose it as your mother used to do before you. She actually lost $1,000 in bills once which I was sending by her to the bank."

"And just because my mother happened to lose that, I suppose I can never have any furs," wailed Sally, recurring to the original theme of the controversy.

"You might get something from the old cedar chest in the garret; there is a muff and boa which your mother used to wear."

"And which moths have probably devoured ages ago," declared the unappeased Sally.

"You can find out by looking," her grandmother returned indifferently. Sally did not feel very hopeful as she presently ascended the stairs to the murky little garret. And she felt still less hopeful when she lifted the lid of the cedar chest. And there, near the bottom, wrapped in musty paper, were the muff and boa—not so ravaged by moths as might be presumed.

"I can trim off the eaten edges and make quite a passable article of this," Sally mused as she twirled the big muff in an interested inspection. "But what in the world is in the lining?" she asked herself, cautiously fingering something which was neither fur nor wadding, and shrinking with a little nervous dread of an ambushed mouse.

But that she warily drew forth at length was not a mouse. What she gazed upon with incredulous eyes was a roll of bills which, of course, must be the $1,000 which her mother had lost so long ago.

How long Sally stood dazed in that dim old garret she never knew. It was her hour of temptation. By the right of her long unpaid and thankless drudgery, the money was hers. With it she and Wesley could begin life so delightfully—but all the same the money belonged to her grandmother.

"I should like to know what all this is?" Grandma Brooks queried with severity a little later as Sally was preparing the dinner. "You haven't the mince pie warming yet, and you're actually putting mustard over the cranberry jelly. I should suppose you'd be more heedful when I have invited Wesley here to dinner."

Just then the door bell rang, and the grandmother went to the door. A moment later Wesley Burbank followed her into the room.

"I hope Sally won't spoil our dinner," she said, crossly, for Sally had dropped the luckless mustard bottle, and stood with an averted face, unmistakably crying.

"She is sulking about some furs," Grandma Brooks sniffed in her most aggravating fashion.

Sally turned impulsively, with flaming cheeks. "I could have more than a set of furs," she said, saucily.

"If I had a mind to be as unjust and wicked as you are, but I shall not keep from you what is your own. There is the money my mother lost years ago. It was in the mothly old muff you allowed me as a birthday present to-day."

For a moment there was an impressive silence. And then Grandma Brooks turned slowly toward the pair. "I don't intend to have our dinner marred by heroics nor any other nonsense," she avowed, with her severest frown. "But perhaps there will be no harm done, Wesley Burbank, if you will look at the dates of the bills Sally found in the muff. Then you will admit what was lost years ago has not been so easily found. I mean my granddaughters to share alike all I have. If I have been strict with Sally, you have no reason to complain, for I have trained a clever housewife for you, and her honesty has been tested and proved as you will know. The $1,000 is my birthday present to her. Old folks can outwit the young ones every time."

And the young people admitted with remorse that Grandma Brooks spoke the truth.

A VERY YOUNG CASE.

A young couple just out of childhood in a garden, he sitting on a rustic bench, she lounging in a hammock. The flowers are in bloom, the air is balmy, the sky a beautiful blue—just the surroundings for flirting. Flirting is not a good word, especially in the case of a man, but there is a distinction between it and courting. It is a lighter grade of the same article, just as claret differs from burgundy.

"Do you know," he said, "that I've had some success lately in mind reading?"

"Well, last evening I was calling at the Harrisons, and we all got to talking about mind reading. It was proposed that we each in turn try what we could do. When it came my turn I made some experiments with Edith."

"He paused and looked at her quizzically. "Why do you look surprised?"

"I didn't know she had any mind to read."

"H'm! She's very bright. I told her just what she was thinking about."

"I suppose it was something deep?" "Oh, no! Nothing of importance. Then I—"

"What was it?"

There was a battle of words. He strove to avoid telling her, but eventually yielded. "She was thinking of you."

"And do you consider me 'nothing of importance'?"

"I mean—I mean—I didn't mean—What I intended—"

"And was Edith thinking that I am nothing of importance?"

"She didn't say anything about that."

"But if you were reading her mind you must have known what she thought about me."

He scratched his head, then stumbled on: "Well, you see, it was like this: I was thinking about you, and your being on my mind, maybe it was a case of transference of thought."

This was placating. A suspicion of a pleased smile stole over her lips. She didn't speak again for a few minutes, and when she did her tone was milder.

"What were you thinking about me?"

"Oh, I don't know. Suppose I try to mind read you?"

"Very well."

Presently he said: "Somewhat or other I feel—I think—I am impressed with the presence of a tall young man with a long neck and spindle legs. He wears glasses and has a very good opinion of himself. He's Sam Collamore. You're thinking about him."

"That's not a description of Mr. Collamore. And I wasn't thinking about him at all. I was thinking about you."

This was spoken with a bit of sharpness.

"Do you mean that I look like Sam?"

"It's not very polite in you to speak so of a friend of mine."

"You said Edith Harrison had no mind."

"And she hasn't. But Mr. Collamore has, and he's a fine young man. So, there! Go on mind reading, but leave out Mr. Collamore."

He resumed his position again, covering his eyes. "I see myself—myself as you see me—a person easily deceived—just the man for a girl to make a fool of. You are thinking that you will use me this summer, just as you used Billy Perkins last summer and Tom—"

"Please drop the personalities."

"Well, that's all. Suppose you try it on me."

She placed her round white hand, with taper fingers, over her eyes in a becoming fashion and said: "You are not thinking of anybody—that is, anybody but yourself. You are thinking how when your vacation comes you go up to the ladies and find a new girl who will be silly enough to trust you implicitly."

"What'll you be doing all that time?"

"Don't break the spell. I'm mind reading. I'm telling you what your'e thinking about. And you'll leave her, come back here and devote yourself to—"

"Edith Harrison?"

"Do you suppose that I care how devoted you are to Edith Harrison?" And she snapped her fingers viciously.

"Certainly not! It is the new girl up at the lakes who was silly enough to trust me that I am speaking of."

"I'll go on with the mind reading if you like. I come back here and devote myself to a girl who doesn't care how devoted I am to another girl at the same time, and—"

"I didn't say that. I—"

She stopped short.

"You?"

"How ridiculous!" he went on presently. "I'm talking about what you're thinking about, remember. Finally it all comes out that I don't care a rap about any of these girls, except one, and she doesn't care a rap about me. But—"

"Which one?"

He described the girl in the hammock. She listened with growing pleasure as he mentioned her different features, prefixing "beautiful" to all of them till he came to her hair.

"My hair isn't auburn. It's—"

"By jove! There's the clock striking 10. I'm off for practice with the team. Good-by! See you later."

But he didn't. He saw another girl. —Anna Bentley.
